The Hyderabad Synthetic Drugs Plant is one of the three medical industry projects built with Soviet economic and technical assistance. The other two projects are the Antibiotics Plant of Rishikesh and the Surgical Instruments Factory at Madras.

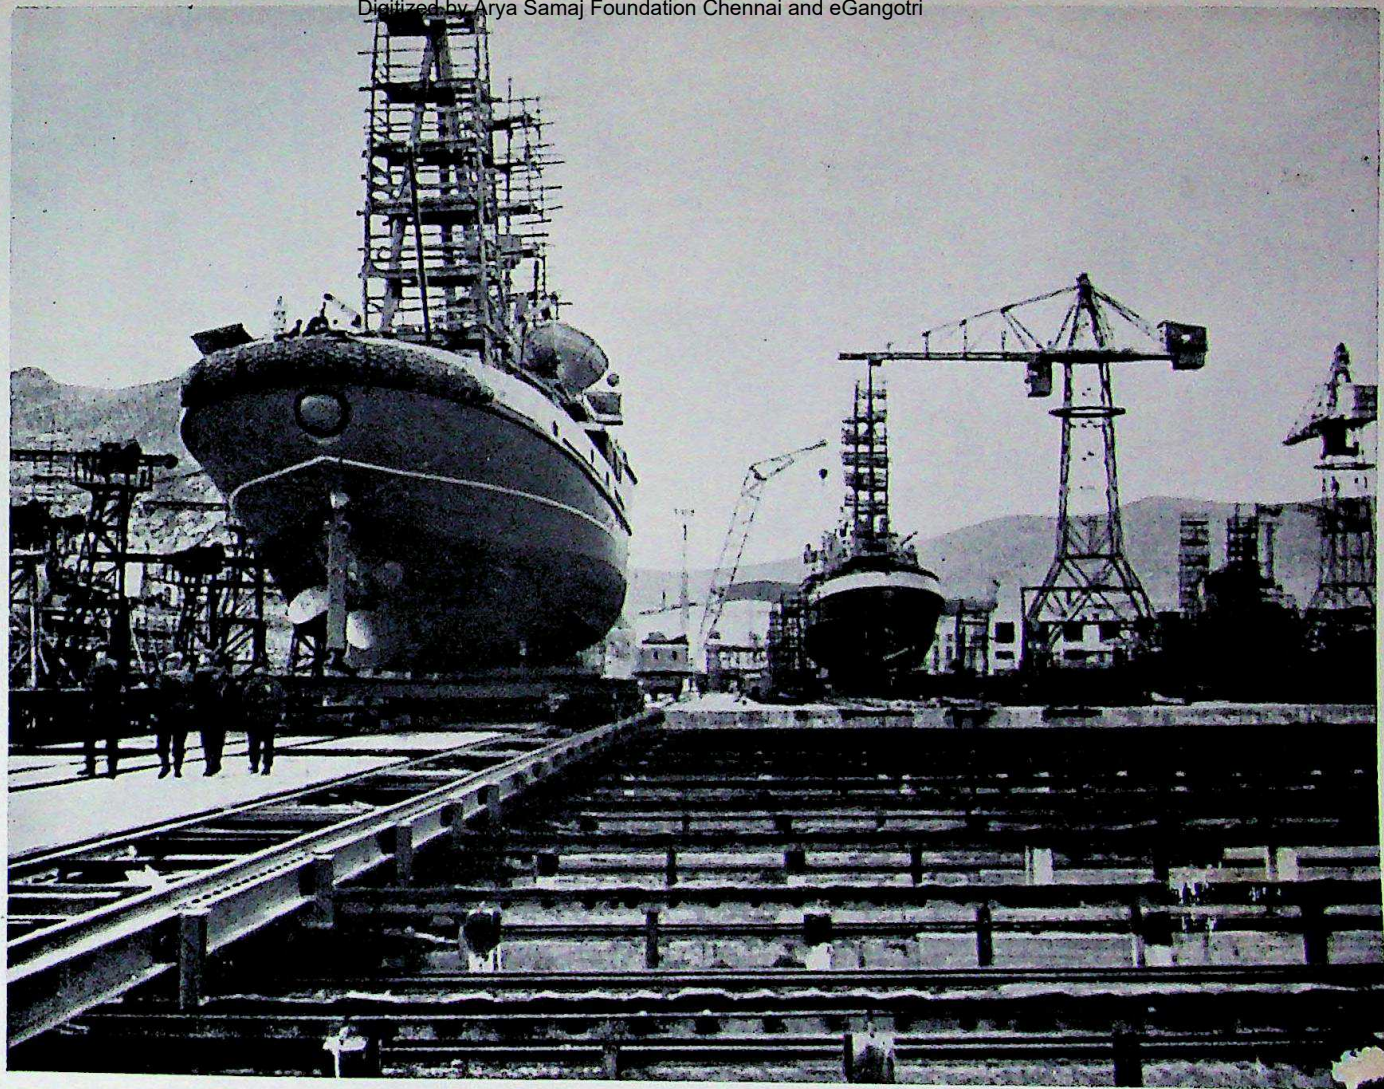

The Hyderabad Synthetic Drugs Plant which went into production in December 1966, has been designed to produce such life saving drugs which India was, hitherto, running short of. The Project occupies an area of 440,000 square metres.

The Plant stands unique in many ways. First of all the Hyderabad Synthetic Drugs Plant uses indigenous raw materials for the preparation of drugs. Besides this, the Plant is going to take up the production work of about 10 intermediates (semi-products) to support the production at other similar plants in the country. At full capacity the Plant will produce 850 tons of synthetic drugs, including various types of vitamins.

The Project has a training centre where Soviet experts provide systematic training to the Indian staff. During the past few years more than 800 Indian workers have received special training at this centre.

Two years ago on January 10, 1966, the historic Tashkent Declaration was signed between the Prime Minister of India Lal Bahadur Shastri and President of Pakistan M. Ayub Khan. The meeting was arranged in Tashkent through the good offices of the Soviet Government. This photo taken in Tashkent on January 6, 1966 shows Lal Bahadur Shastri with Alexei Kosygin, Chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers.

On April 12, 1961, the first man's entrance into space was made aboard the Vostok 1 spacecraft and made around the Earth. The Soviet Government gave Yuri Gagarin the title "Hero of the Soviet Union" and

Though Gagarin played a major role in the space program, he was not the first Soviet cosmonaut. The first Soviet cosmonaut to die on a mission was Vladimir Seregin, who died on March 24, 1968, while making a test flight of the Soyuz 9 spacecraft. Col. Engineer Seregin also

On March 24, 1968, his wife, a nurse in a hospital, died. He consists of a 34-year-old son, Yuri, who was born a cosmonaut's son.

Gagarin was born in a village of a farmer in the Middle Ural Region. He graduated from a vocational school and later from a technical school. In 1955, he joined the Air Force School in the Ural Mountains. At that time, he was the first cosmonaut.

Vladimir Ilyich Lenin was born on April 22, 1870, in the town of Simbirsk on the Volga. His father was an inspector of schools.

After finishing secondary school Lenin entered the university of Kazan. But soon afterwards he was arrested by the tsarist authorities for taking part in the revolutionary movement of the students, and was banished from Kazan. That is how Lenin took the road of revolutionary struggle.

In 1889, he settled in the city of Samara, where he continued to study the works of Marx and Engels, and organized a Marxist circle. On suspicion of revolutionary activity, Lenin was deprived of the right to attend university lectures. He studied at home and in the autumn of 1891 took his examinations as an external student at the St. Petersburg University, passed them brilliantly and got his law degree.

In 1893, Lenin moved from Samara to St. Petersburg (now Leningrad), then the capital of Russia. He carried on extensive agitation among the workers of St. Petersburg, educating them in Marxist theory and teaching them to fight for the realisation of not only economic but also political demands. In 1895, he united the workers' Marxist circles in St. Petersburg into a single organisation, the League of Struggle for Emancipation of the Working Class. This organisation was the embryo of the well-known revolutionary workers' party in Russia.

In December 1895, the police arrested Lenin and other leaders of the League. After being kept behind bars for 14 months, he was exiled to the village of Shushenskoye in far-away Eastern Siberia. During the three years of exile Lenin wrote many theoretical works and articles in which he developed Marxist teachings and presented correct answers to the urgent fundamental questions, confronting the working class movement in Russia.

In January 1900, Lenin came back from exile with a plan to publish a political newspaper. But as it was very difficult, under the tsarist regime, to publish a newspaper advocating man's freedom, he went abroad and lived for some time in Switzerland, Germany and England. While in Germany, he succeeded in making arrangements to publish the newspaper Iskra, which was smuggled across the border into Russia by friends.

Lenin's relentless struggle for the establishment of a proletarian party in Russia was crowned with success. The party (now the Communist Party of the Soviet Union) rallied Russia's proletariat for the struggle against tsarism, for the establishment of democratic republic and for the emancipation of the working people from exploitation.

In January 1905, the first bourgeois-democratic revolution began in Russia. At the height of the struggle Lenin returned to Russia and personally directed all the work of the Party.

After the tsarist authorities had succeeded in crushing the revolution, Lenin, in compliance with a decision of the Party, again left the country for a time. But he continued to inspire courage into the hearts of the Russian workers and peasants from abroad.

When the First World War broke out, Lenin and the other Russian communists resolutely and consistently came out against the imperialist war.

February 1917 saw the beginning of the second bourgeois-democratic revolution in Russia. Under the onslaught of the workers and peasants the tsarist autocracy fell, but power was seized by the bourgeoisie and the landowners, who were supported by the petty-bourgeois Menshevik and Socialist Revolutionary parties. The Provisional Government that was set up betrayed the interests of the people and the country; it made preparations to turn Russia into a colony of foreign imperialism.

Lenin came back from abroad. He immediately announced a programme for the further unfolding of the revolutionary movement of the workers, soldiers and working peasantry, rousing them to the struggle for establishing a people's government in Russia. The Provisional Government attempted to make short work of Lenin and he had to go into hiding, but that did not hinder him from guiding the whole course of events.

The October Socialist Revolution in Russia became victorious. For the first time in the history of mankind the power passed into the hands of the representatives of workers, peasants and soldiers. The people became sole masters of the land and minerals, factories, mills and mines, railways and banks, in short, the entire wealth of the country.

Immediately after the victory of the socialist revolution the Decree on Peace was adopted on Lenin's initiative, in which the Soviet Government appealed to the belligerent countries and all peoples to conclude a democratic peace immediately. The Decree on Peace actually laid the foundation for the policy of peaceful co-existence.

Lenin headed the first government of the world's first socialist state. In this office, which he held until his death, on January 21, 1924, he displayed his genius as a statesman. Great scholar, leader and organizer, he was closely linked with the people and had boundless faith in their great power and talents.

The broad masses of workers and peasants mastered the art of governing the state. The interests of the new, socialist state became the vital interests of each and every class-conscious worker and peasant and of the forward looking intelligentsia.

When the foreign imperialists sent the troops of 14 states to help the counter-revolution, under Lenin's direct leadership the armed forces of the Soviet Republic's enemies were given a crushing rebuff.

It required tremendous efforts to rehabilitate the country's ravaged economy. On Lenin's initiative a plan for the electrification of the country was drawn up and its implementation was begun at once. Lenin believed that in order to build a new society in Russia, it was first of all necessary to develop an up-to-date industry, to help the peasants transform their petty individual farms into large-scale mechanised collective farms, and to carry through a cultural revolution.

The essence of Lenin's teachings is that the abolition of man's exploitation by man and the transfer of all material wealth to the people form the basis of a new society of true democracy and freedom, which alone can provide a secure life for every person, irrespective of his origin or nationality. And everything the Soviet Government does, everything the peoples of the Soviet Union create and build, is the realisation of Lenin's dreams, ideas and thoughts.

"...Lenin has become a mighty tradition, not only in his native Russia, but in the world at large. As time passes he grows greater, he has become one of the chosen company of the world's immortals. Petrograd has become Leningrad, and almost every house in Russia has a Lenin corner or a Lenin picture. But he lives, not in monuments or pictures, but in the mighty work he did, and in the hearts of hundreds of millions of workers to-day who find inspiration in his example, and the hope of a better day."

The 150th birth anniversary of communism, genius of world's proletariat, will be world on May 5.

Karl Marx was born in the family of a lawyer. What his life was to be, a life of fighting for their betterment from his beloved enemies——nothing could be.

After graduating from Doctor of Philosophy, University. But he was forced to become a publicist, owing to the Prussian Government.

In the autumn of 1848, for the first time. Since then his life was full of retical and practical activities.

The teaching of Marx was the best of everything that had been in the shape of German philosophy, socialism. Marx showed the conditions of production, and the political and ideological development in a society divided into classes.

Capital, Marx's most important work, Marx gave a new production as a socio-economic origin, development and change the world, to free the world from exploitation and lead them to a better life.

Beginning with the history, the form of the country from the year 1848 to the history "of that great revolution". He passionately laid bare the India : he ardently sympathized with the movement against British rule, and would win full freedom and independence.

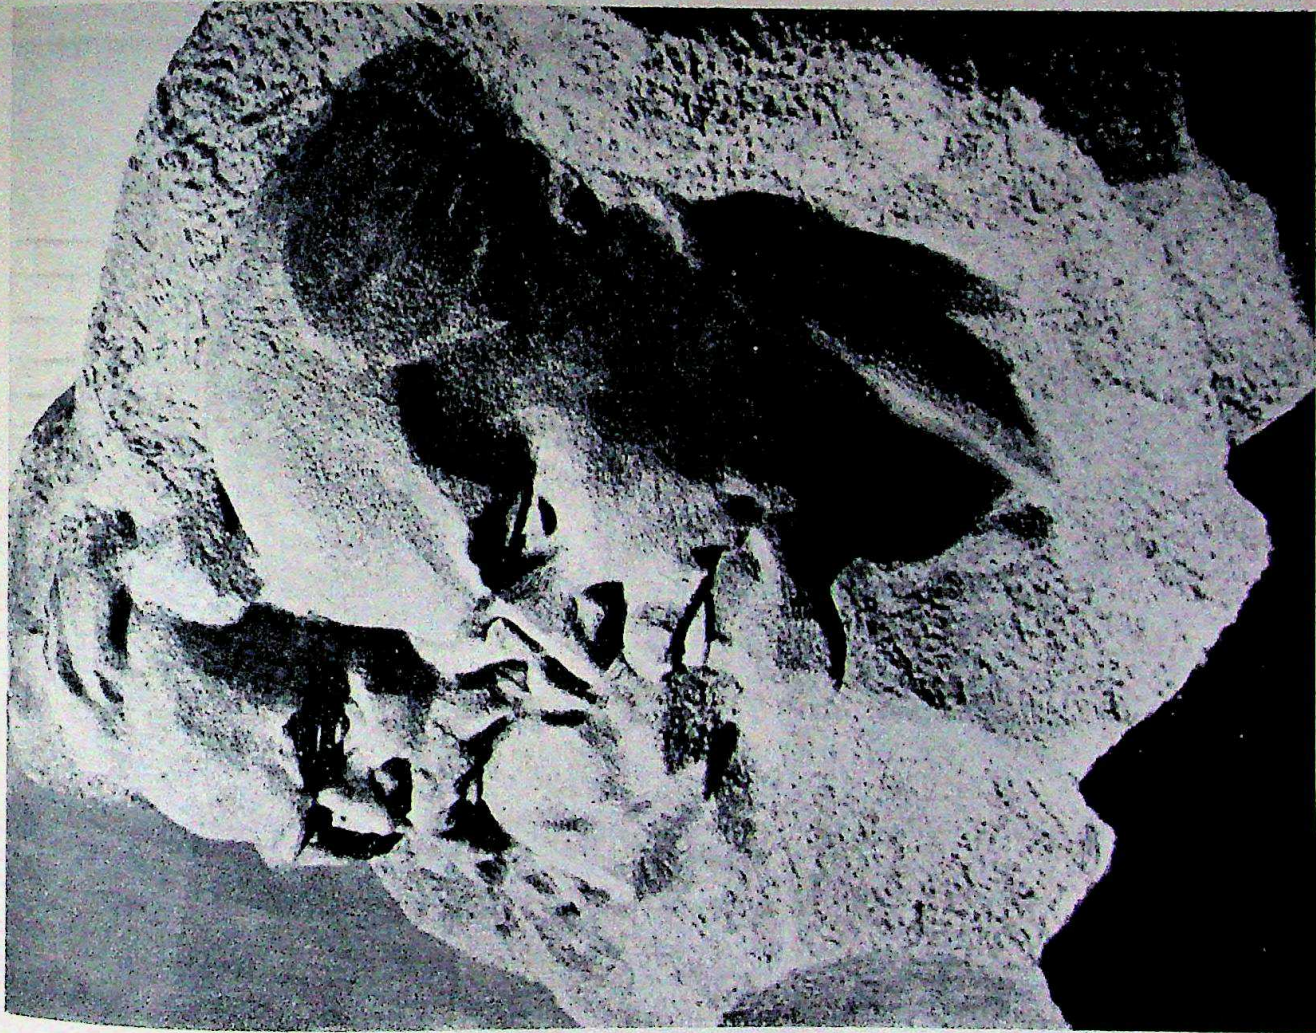

Marx died on March 14, 1883. Marxism in the new world, enriched by the great contributions of the scientific theory of the Communist Party, have led to the exploitation of man by man.

Karl Marx, author of Capital, who discovered the law of development of human history.

Tens of millions of Soviet people took part in May Day celebrations in the USSR on May 1, 1968. This day of international solidarity of workers, a holiday of the friendship of workers of all countries, was marked in the Soviet Union with a review of the country's achievements, with a manifestation of the solidarity of the Soviet people with the people of Vietnam, of the Arab countries —of all peoples engaged in struggle against imperialism.

Powerful ballistic missiles, including 3-stage intercontinental rockets with a new propellant, were on view in Moscow's Red Square during the traditional military parade on the occasion. The parade was viewed from the Lenin Mausoleum by Leonid Brezhnev, Alexei Kosygin, Nikolai Podgorny and other Soviet leaders. The USSR Defence Minister, Marshal of the Soviet Union Andrei Grechko took the salute.

The parade which lasted for 45 minutes, included a display of armoured personnel carriers, self-propelled guns with great fire power, tanks, long-range artillery, missile launchers and other military equipments.

JUBILEE OF KOMSOMOL

The 50th anniversary of the Komsomol (Young Communist League) of the Soviet Union, which falls due on October 29, 1968 will be a landmark in the history of mankind. It will be an important occasion of a truly international significance.

The path traversed by this historic organisation is strewn with countless sacrifices and dedicated work of its members. The Young Communist League has been in the forefront of every sphere of the Soviet life right from the days of the Civil War, through the heroic construction campaigns of the thirties, the Second World War, the work of rehabilitation after the war and upto the present era of brave exploits in the field of space exploration.

The Komsomol, a mass non-party organisation has over 23 million youth in its fold in the age group of 15 to 28.

1917 1968

Fiftyone years ago, the Great October Socialist Revolution in Russia led by V.I. Lenin ushered in a new era in the history of mankind. The October Revolution still attracts the world's attention, just as it did at the time of its accomplishment.

The pre-revolutionary Russia which occupied one of the last places among the countries, has now emerged as one of the world's most powerful states. Today, the Soviet Union is the second industrial power in the world and leaves behind even such industrially developed countries as Britain, West Germany, France, and others. At present, the USSR produces more iron-ore, coke and coal than the USA.

In the economic sphere the October Revolution has ushered in an era of public ownership of the means of production and a planned development of production forces aimed at an uniformed material well-being of the people ; in the social and political sphere it proclaimed the abolition of exploitation of man by man and of any social and national oppression. It has built up a new type of state—a Soviet socialist state, and a new type of democracy, democracy for the people.

To the impoverished, oppressed and ignorant people the October Revolution has shown a scientifically substantiated way to another life, worthy of man's dignity.

The 51st anniversary of the Great October Socialist Revolution was widely celebrated in the Soviet Union on November 7, 1968.

In Moscow the traditional military parade on the Red Square was viewed by Marshal Andrei Grechko, the USSR Defence Minister. The numerous guests, attending the celebrations, who packed the stands to capacity, applauded the leaders of the CPSU and the Soviet Government, the Prime Minister of Afghanistan, Noor Ahmad Etemadi, and Soviet military leaders as they appeared on the central stand of the Lenin Mausoleum. The guests included delegations from scores of countries.

The military parade, which continued for 45 minutes, demonstrated once again the power of the Soviet Army, which is reliably safeguarding the peaceful labour of the Soviet people and the peoples of the fraternal socialist countries.

The Prime Minister Smt. Indira Gandhi gave away the Soviet Land Nehru Awards for 1968 in literature and journalism at an impressive ceremony in New Delhi on November 15, 1968. The Awards have been instituted in India by the Soviet Land magazine since 1964.

Soviet men of letters and artists, winners of the Jawaharlal Nehru Awards, instituted by the Government of India in the USSR, also received the awards from the Prime Minister.

Eight eminent Indian writers and journalists—Vrindavan Lal Verma, Bimal Chandra Ghosh, Sardar Mohan Singh, Basavaraju Kattimani, Smt. Jaya Thakore, Kumari Qurrat-ul-Ain-Hyder, K.P. G. Namboodiri and Darshan Singh—were awarded the prizes which include a free fortnight's trip to the USSR.

Five Indian children were awarded one month's holiday each at the world-famous Artek Young Pioneer Camp on the Black Sea coast for children's painting competition on the theme "At an Indian Festival with Soviet Friends".
